

	Pretend you are a character in your story. Write 5 journal entries that tell about your adventure.	Make a set of trading cards for the characters in your story. Include portrait on the front, and characteristics on the back.	Create a book cover for a story of your choice. Include the name of the author and illustrator, AND include a quick "teaser" on the back.	Choose one story and write a new ending for this story.	Compare the story you have read with something that happened: to you, in another book, in the world. Use a Venn diagram and write a comparison.
	Create clay models of three characters from stories you have read. Make sure these models highlight the main traits of these characters.	Use an ipad to make a movie about a story you have read. Take time before to plan the "screenplay" and scenes.	Make a diorama of an important event in a story you have read. Be ready to tell why you chose this event.	Design the outfits that some of your characters might have worn. Make them if you can.	Find a book set in the time period from your story. Make a brochure with at least 7 facts about that historical time period.
	Take on the persona of one of the characters from a stories you have read. Prepare a scene to act out in front of your class.	Make a comic strip of one of the stories you have read. Include the illustrations and dialogue bubbles.	Design a cereal box for a character of your choice. What cereal would they sell, and what attributes would be included on the box?	On the front and back of a poster, compare and contrast two of your favorite stories.	Make a wanted sign for a villain in a stories you have read.